

Getting Acquainted

Designed by Peter Gerrickens and Marijke Verstege, Getting Acquainted is a great way to kick-start conversations, and introduce individuals within a group at the beginning of a meeting or training session to create a relaxed atmosphere. It is a fun and engaging introduction and icebreaker activity that allows you to get acquainted with other people in an unexpected and informal way. Even if you already know each other you can use this game to get to know colleagues, co-workers, and friends! It is even better as a great teambuilding exercise.

The purpose of this game is to get acquainted with other people in an unexpected way. Becoming acquainted within a group in a pleasing and inviting manner is very stimulating.

Getting Acquainted includes 56x cards (each with a question and corresponding picture), and an introductory facilitator manual with activity examples.

Each card contains a thought provoking question alongside an associated picture. The pictures are humorous, inviting and stimulating. By matching a question to a picture, you become more involved with the question and your creativity will be stimulated. This enables you to easily find a matching answer to the question at hand.

The questions on the cards are divided into six categories:

- Youth and past
- Character and interests
- Behaviour and daily life
- Motivation & inspiration
- Work & career
- Wishes and future

Here are some examples of when Getting acquainted could be used:

- As an icebreaker or an introductory activity
- As a way to build relationships both in and out of the workplace
- A tool to help participants better understand cultural and personal differences
- Personal Development
- A way to become better acquainted with colleagues, co-workers and even friends.
- "Easy to use and creates easy conversation. If necessary, you can select specific cards so that they are appropriate for the moment. The cards are high quality, and have many different images that make asking questions very easy!"
- "Convenient, practical, and easy to use!"
- "A fun introductory activity for groups to get to know each other better. Highly Recommend!"
